First Job

She was sleeping with the Donald Duck night light on a little girl scared of the dark.

Curled up in an animal print blanket, one leg of her footed pink sleeper uncovered relaxed in sleep.

She awoke and smiled at my plastic Bozo mask, the night light dotting her eyes.

She watched me, choking silently, a single tear sliding to her ear while I listening to her final breath wheeze out made my first one thousand dollars, trying ever so gently not to leave bruises on her neck.
